PRECISION PLANNING, INC. (PPI) was founded in Lawrenceville, GA in 1982 by Randall W. Dixon. Today, PPI is a multi-disciplined professional service firm with 115 employees still located in Lawrenceville, GA, that provides a variety of services to both public and private clients in and around the state of Georgia. The list of professional services currently includes architecture, commercial engineering, grant procurement, land planning, landscape architecture, residential engineering, surveying, transportation engineering, and water and sewer resources. The company has evolved into what it is today because of our commitment to our client relationships and our pledge to hire and retain the most qualified, highly motivated and integrity-conscious personnel.

PPI offers the clients and companies we work with, in and around Gwinnett, the unique dedication to achieving common goals through perseverance, building profitable relationships through commitment and creating solutions that meet the diversity of their needs. We separated ourselves from the competition with our professional staff that comes from a comprehensive cross-section of small and large professional design firms, local governments and state and federal agencies. We offer the experience, qualification and capabilities of a large consulting firm, while maintaining the close-knit atmosphere and personal client service of a small consulting firm. The companies that we work with realize we achieve results by using the latest and most updated software, hardware and technical equipment. They also understand we have a superior ability for coordination and administration of projects between private enterprises, municipal entities and governmental agencies. Finally, clients and companies choose to do business with PPI not only for our expert professional qualifications, but because we believe that the relationships we build are as important as the projects themselves.

PPI works diligently to help improve the quality of life for the Gwinnett community and surrounding areas. We have obtained this through our technical expertise, innovative planned developments and the design of essential infrastructure and public buildings. We also make it a point to have our company business such as banking, insurance, benefits and social events handled by other Gwinnett civic-minded companies. Our employees live, work, educate and play in and around Gwinnett County and are involved in numerous civic, charitable and community-based efforts.

PPI benefits from the Gwinnett Chamber with its network of business professionals, government employees, politicians, education employees and homeowners at a vast array of events. Our chamber membership allows us to tap into the knowledge of fellow members and also have a voice and an impact on community issues. Finally, the Gwinnett Chamber allows PPI and its employees to give back to Gwinnett, the community that has presented us the opportunity to become the successful business we are today.
